A List of

Communist Tactics in International Conferences

(riburion

I think it is a well organized and well documented paper on a subject which defies a disciplined study based on objective patterns. We have done the best in pointing out the highlights to those who are not already aware of Communist tactics.

The paper could possibly use a summary which need be but a reworking of the introduction.

Reading the paper, I get the impression of the Soviets as cold, calculating planners. There is, nevertheless, the human factor which has been underemphasized in this paper. It is hard to believe that the Soviets are as well organized and efficient as this paper indicates. It might be worthwhile to add a few pages listing Soviet human failures in international conferences, which failures constitute Soviet diplomatic vulnerabilities suitable for US exploitation in the future. The paper, in other words, would be more balanced if it devoted more space to Soviet weaknesses in relation to Soviet strengths.
